

see the social boundaries

by ~ShadowpawMFur

I see the social boundaries
As separate little ponds,
Where the fish of different colors
Mingle with their own;
Where one can step to the bank
And watch them swim and spin
In continuous circles
And feel pity for them.

I see the social boundaries
As reflective tape at the finish line,
Where someone could break the barrier
If they really wanted to reach the end;
Where marathon runners have the choice
To reach out and tear away the doubt
That causes others to feel distant
And bring together a new family.

I see the social boundaries
As an ocean filled with many islands,
Where the people have the ability
But not the drive to connect with others;
Where they can build boats and bridges
To bring others into their lives
But don't have the courage
To welcome all with open arms.

I see social boundaries
As separate little ponds,
And now I'm ready
To jump in.